Loving Earth: A legacy of lockdown

Do you live, work or study in Merton? Are you feeling creative?

Be part of our project!

The COVID Pandemic has affected people in different ways. As well as suffering, loneliness and challenges for many, it's also been a time to reflect on how we relate to our environment and how we could do things differently in future.

Sustainable Merton and the Loving Earth Project invite you to join a community textile project to explore these issues and how you can help create a more sustainable future in Merton, as well as a legacy of this unique period in history.

What are we asking you to do?

You are invited to create a textile panel in any style to illustrate your reflections (measuring 30 x 30cm). We hope your creation, together with a few words from you, will be part of a local exhibition in late Spring 2021 and join the Loving Earth Project's international touring exhibition, returning to form a lasting legacy in Merton.

We will also be running workshops to help you get started and regular online chats to explore the issues, reduce the isolation and anxiety of lockdown, and help us all produce panels to be proud of, whatever your age or level of textile skill.

Get involved!

Please get in touch if you are interested in making a panel or would like to volunteer your time to help make this project happen. Email: info@sustainablemerton.org
